

THE COCOON SOFA

Paul Rogers x Jonas Van Put

THE STORY

The Cocoon sofa derives its design language from the protective cocoon of the silk butterfly. Born from an intuitive, hands-on process, Jonas Van Put sculpted a scale model by hand rather than starting from a technical drawing. The sculptural shell wraps around its occupant in natural soft curves, while tactile wide straps composed of semicircles support the body naturally. A distinctive detail at the back, where vertical straps gradually transition into horizontal ones, reveals itself only upon closer inspection.

THE DESIGNER

Jonas Van Put is a Belgian independent designer whose work is driven by intuition, material exploration and a deep respect for process. His approach is hands-on and experimental, allowing form to emerge from direct engagement with material.

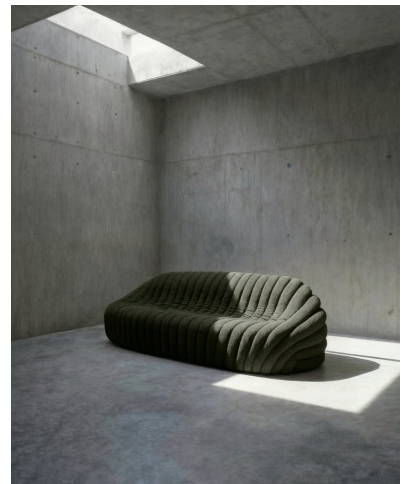

QUOTE

"I wanted to create something that feels protective without isolating you. A form that follows the body rather than forcing itself onto it."
