CAST and TUKAN by Nicholas Erreweyaert for Dauby Contemporary Belgian hardware shaped by archetypal forms, sand casting and simplicity

During Antwerp Design Week 2026, Dauby highlights CAST and TUKAN, two hardware collections developed in collaboration with young Antwerp designer Nicholas Erreweyaert. Both collections reflect a shared vision of contemporary Belgian design, where simplicity, tactility and character come together through artisanal production.

The collaboration grew from a natural connection. Nicholas had known Dauby since childhood, making this project a meeting point between his clear, balanced design language and Dauby's long-standing expertise in traditional hardware.

Both collections are rooted in a fascination with archetypal forms and everyday objects whose elegance comes from use, proportion and clarity. CAST draws inspiration from cast tools such as pliers, keys and handles, translating their familiar grip and quiet functionality into contemporary hardware. TUKAN explores a more sculptural balance between volume, softness and strength, resulting in pieces that feel bold yet restrained.

Produced through traditional sand casting and finished by hand, CAST and TUKAN carry the tactile depth and subtle individuality that define Dauby. Together, they express a shared belief in honest materials, craftsmanship and timeless design.

With CAST and TUKAN, Dauby continues its dialogue between artisanal heritage and contemporary Belgian design, presenting hardware that feels both familiar and new.

Belgian design with international appeal

With CAST and TUKAN, Dauby further strengthens its position as a leading name in Belgian design.

These collections show how tradition and innovation do not compete, but elevate one another. They are designs that bring harmony, feel as though they have always been there, and yet introduce something new.
